What if you were faced with a physically traumatic event where people's lives were at stake?

How would you react in an EMERGENCY when seconds count?

Dr. Andrew Dennis is on the front lines facing trauma every day. He grew up in the 1970s watching Emergency, S.W.A.T. and Adam 12 - hit television shows that featured paramedics, police officers and an intrepid SWAT team. Today, Dr. Dennis lives all three of those shows.

As a speaker, Dr. Dennis will address the best way for everyone - from the novice to the professional - to deal with such trauma. He breaks this complex topic into understandable components that each of us can clearly learn and apply. Intense, yet warm and friendly, Dr. Dennis uses real-life examples taken from the field and the trauma unit to convey his message in a confident and engaging manner that will keep audiences riveted.

"It's beyond first aid," Dr. Dennis says. "We focus on perception, decisions and actions and how they inter-relate."

In today's volatile world, trauma can strike at any time. The terrible tragedies at Columbine High School, the Aurora, Colo., theater, and the Ft. Hood U.S. military installation, coupled with the national destruction our nation witnessed during the 9-11 terrorist attacks, demonstrate that severe trauma is in our midst and no one is immune.

Whether you are an average citizen, a police officer, security professional, paramedic, educator, or business manager, you need to hear his message about how to respond to a trauma situation to help save lives. Dr. Dennis covers it from all aspects - medical, psychological and emotional - and empowers everyone to enhance their chances to survive and manage any traumatic experience.

"This is an excellent talk that might mean the difference between life and death," said Chris Callas, an officer with the Mundelein, Ill. Police Department.
